

And the winner is... Patti Jo Uplinger of Linesville

Seventy-seven people participated in FaithLife's recent trivia contest about the origins of the Nativity set. And, thanks to the Internet, everyone who responded answered all three questions correctly. Names were placed in a random drawing, with the winner picked Nov. 29.

Although the questions were easy (if you have a computer), FaithLife wanted readers to take time this Advent season to learn about St. Francis' reenactment of the first Nativity scene. Here are the questions and correct answers:

1. In what year was a Nativity scene first staged publicly? 1223 A.D.
  2. Which pope gave his permission to present this Nativity? Pope Honorius III
  3. This Nativity scene was set up in a cave. In what village? Creccio, Italy.
- Congratulations, Patti Jo! A member of St. Philip Parish in Linesville, she wins a $75 gift certificate to Hofmann's Church & Religious Goods, Erie.

One-day total: $2.9 million Anonymous donor triples gifts to Prep/Villa

BY MARY SOLBERG | FAITHLIFE

Cathedral Preparatory School and Villa Maria Academy in Erie collected a record $2.9 million in a one-day fundraising effort that school officials say "exceeded our wildest expectations."

The Prep/Villa college preparatory school of the Diocese of Erie has been the recipient of many generous gifts over the years, but the one-day fundraising total was what Chris Hagerty, director of strategic initiatives, called "off the charts successful."

"I do consulting work in advancement all over the country and I've never seen anything like this," Hagerty told FaithLife. "We got blown away."

According to Hagerty, school officials sent out the annual fundraiser appeal this fall, but they added a twist: Any single gift made during a 24-hour period on Nov. 12 would be tripled by an anonymous donor. By the end of the day, 1,259 single gifts had come in—mostly online—totaling about $741,000. That sum, plus the tripled amount, added up to $2.9 million, Hagerty said.

Prep/Villa has never raised that much money in one day. Previous one-day fundraisers netted up to $25,000. But throughout the 24-hour period Nov. 12, Hagerty watched as three to four online gifts were given per minute. About 90 percent of the gifts were made online, and many came from alumni, parents, grandparents and friends of Villa and Prep.

"The generosity of our people is amazing," Hagerty said. "It is these people who have taken ownership of our school."

Even Prep and Villa students contributed to the fundraiser. More than 60 percent of the combined student population donated money to the effort, giving about $9,800.

Bishop Lawrence Persico called the fundraising campaign "a testament to the loyalty and confidence" that donors have in both schools.

"The support that was given is also an indication of the quality of education that is found at Cathedral Prep and Villa," Bishop Persico said.

The money, all unrestricted dollars, will likely be used to help fund the five-year strategic plan of Prep/Villa. Currently in year three of that plan, school board members will determine how best to use the $2.9 million.

Among some of the possible uses of the funds, Hagerty said, are facility improvements at both Villa and Prep, including air conditioning. The funds also may be used to enhance educational programs and to maintain solid wages for faculty.

"Every dime will go to help in the strategic plan," Hagerty added. "Money can go very quickly, but our job is to use it wisely."

For Hagerty, there's an underlying message in Prep/Villa's success this fall. Other Catholic schools, he said, can do the same thing. The $2.9 million fundraiser was the result of what he called "a full marketing effort" that included regular mailings, emails, and messages sent on Twitter and Facebook.

"If there's one message I'd like to get out to other schools, it's please don't think this is just Prep and Villa," Hagerty said. "Every school can do this. Think big."

Immaculate Conception remains holy day of obligation this year

The Solemnity of the Immaculate Conception on Monday, Dec. 8, remains a holy day of obligation this year even though it falls on a Monday. Any Eucharistic liturgy celebrated on the evening of Sunday, Dec. 7, is a celebration of the second Sunday of Advent, not an anticipated Mass for the Immaculate Conception.

According to the Office of Worship of the Diocese of Erie, an Advent Sunday takes precedence over the celebration of the Immaculate Conception. Masses for the Immaculate Conception, therefore, should be offered on Monday, either in the morning or in the evening.

Special to be aired on WJET-TV in lieu of midnight Mass

The Diocese of Erie is presenting a 30-minute Christmas Eve special on WJET-TV on Dec. 24 from 11:30 p.m. to midnight. The program will include seasonal choir music, readings from Catholic school students, and a message from Bishop Lawrence Persico.

This television special replaces the regular airing of Christmas Eve Mass from St. Peter Cathedral in Erie.

Diocese launches campaign for families

In the Diocese of Erie, families matter, especially as the Catholic Church prepares to welcome Pope Francis to the World Meeting of Families in Philadelphia next year.

On Dec. 1, the Family Life Office kicked off a year-long campaign—Families Always Matter—to strengthen, educate and affirm individuals and families of all ages and stages. The effort includes a website (www.ErieRCD.org/fam.htm) that will serve as a hub for new and important information related to the World Meeting of Families, scheduled Sept. 22-25, 2015.

"The Families Always Matter website is the vehicle that will be used to direct this year-long campaign designed to affirm families in their relationship to God, the church, society and each other," said Ann Badach, director of the Family Life Office.

The website will provide resources found in the newly published catechesis written in preparation for the World Meeting of Families. The resources will include:

- Monthly catechesis. Based on 10 themes from the Family Catechesis developed for the World Meeting of Families.
  - Resource guide. Families will find prayers, parent tips, links to websites and other information.
  - Guest writers. Writers will provide 250-word narratives on the theme of the month.
  - Community resources. A page will be devoted to family friendly activities around the diocese.
  - Incentives. Includes monthly giveaways (must register on the website to win).
  - Grand prize contest. Top three prizes will include a trip to the World Meeting of Families, a weekend family getaway to Splash Laugh, Erie, and a family portrait (sitting fee included).
- Also on the website, there will be links to details about the World Meeting of Families.

Pictured, left to right, are first-grader Keegan Kirkwood, and kindergartners Allie Harton and Blake Marchinke. Keegan holds the prayer. ## Reaction to immigration reform Catholic groups support Obama plan

and CATHOLIC NEWS SERVICE

Advocates for immigration reform in the Diocese of Erie and throughout the country support President Barack Obama's executive action affecting millions of people who don't have legal immigration status.

Although Obama's action is expected to allow up to 4 million immigrants to remain in the country and receive work authorization, many of those pushing for an overhaul of immigration law in the United States still want more, including passage of a comprehensive bill by Congress.

"I wish it were more. It's a start," said Benedictine Sister Marlene Bertke, who has organized monthly vigils in downtown Erie to push for a new immigration law.

"We are going to continue the vigils until Congress passes a sensible immigration law. The executive order [taken by Obama] was good, but it can be rescinded by a new president," said Sister Marlene, coordinator of Benedictines for Peace.

Catholic organizations and labor unions nationwide continue to ask Congress to enact comprehensive immigration reform that would include much of Obama's plan.

action was Archbishop Thomas G. Wenski of Miami, chairman of the U.S. bishops' Committee on Domestic Justice and Human Development.

"What President Obama did will provide relief for a significant number of people," the archbishop told Catholic News Service. "But it's just that."

It's sort of like putting a band-aid on a wound. We still need Congress to act to provide comprehensive immigration reform.

That's the real solution." In the Diocese of Erie, members of a Catholic ministry to refugees, known as People Organized to Welcome Erie Refugees (POWER), will continue to discuss the impact of the president's action.

Father John Santor, a member of the group and a longtime supporter of refugees living in the diocese, said it's time immigration law in the U.S. became more consistent and less a patchwork.

"But I'm happy Obama is making the push for reform," Father Santor said. "I think his goal is noble and worthy."

Sister Rosemary O'Brien, SSI, who mentors legal refugees in the Erie area, said Obama is "rattling the cage" to get Congress to act. Change can't come soon enough, she adds, especially for families.

"There are so many parents who are sending their children unaccompanied to avoid human trafficking and drug violence. How can we close our doors to that?" Sister Rosemary asks.

Obama's action on Nov. 20 will help keep parents with their children, protect workers, and alleviate many families' fears of deportation. But it falls short of what both immigrants and industry leaders were seeking. The most vexing issues they face, like speeding up the process for obtaining permanent residency and getting more visas for high-skilled technology work, would require an act of Congress.

Both Sister Rosemary and Sister Marlene believe that allowing refugees to work here legally would boost America's financial footing.

"It's not simple," Sister Rosemary said. "But if we want our country to thrive, it will help our economy to recognize the people who are working here illegally now."

From a pastoral perspective, Father Jorge Villegas, pastor of St. Stephen of Hungary Parish, Erie, said he's still a little skeptical about what Obama's action will mean. About 65 percent of his parishioners are from Puerto Rico, but there are several from Columbia, Mexico and Haiti. He assumes some are illegal.

"But I never go into that question," Father Villegas said.

Providing the protection of the church is at the core of outreach to immigrants and refugees. Among the agencies working with immigrant communities is Catholic Charities USA.

Father Larry Snyder, president, said the organization is hopeful Obama's plan will lead to much-needed legislation to provide workers with a path to permanent citizenship. He welcomed aspects of the president's plan that would prevent families from being split up and protect children fleeing violence in their homeland.

"In the Gospel of St. Matthew, Jesus says that when we welcome a stranger in his name, we welcome his presence into our hearts," Father Snyder said in a statement.

■ Pope meets with Mideast refugees

ISTANBUL (CNS)—Pope Francis met with young refugees from civil wars in Syria and Iraq, a few hours after joining Ecumenical Patriarch Bartholomew of Constantinople to denounce the plight of Christians there.

"The degrading conditions in which so many refugees are forced to live are intolerable," the pope told about 100 young refugees in Istanbul Nov. 30. "We must do everything possible to eradicate the causes of this situation."

Addressing the refugees, who included Christians and Muslims, Pope Francis publicly reiterated his appreciation for Turkey's acceptance of refugees from neighboring lands—an estimated 1.6 million from Syria alone.

■ Leaders encouraged to condemn violence done in the name of Islam

ABOARD THE PAPAL FLIGHT FROM ISTANBUL (CNS)—Pope Francis called on political and religious leaders across the Muslim world to condemn violence done in the name of Islam.

The pope said he told Turkish President Recep Tayyip Erdogan Nov. 28 that "it would be beautiful if all Islamic leaders—whether they be political leaders, religious leaders, academic leaders—would say clearly that they condemn [terrorism], because that will help the majority of Islamic people to say, 'that's true,'" and show non-Muslims that Islam is a religion of peace.

"I sincerely believe that you cannot say that all Muslims are terrorists just as you cannot say that all Christians are fundamentalists; every religion has these little groups," the pope said.

The pope made his remarks Nov. 30 during a 45-minute news conference on his flight to Rome after a three-day visit to Turkey.

In response to other questions, Pope Francis said: ■ During a televised moment of silent prayer in Istanbul's Blue Mosque Nov. 29, alongside the city's grand mufti, "I prayed for Turkey, I prayed for the mufti, I prayed for myself because I need it, and I prayed above all for the peace and an end to war."

■ Both the Catholic and Orthodox churches include conservative members resistant to ecumenism, who must nonetheless be treated with respect: "A conservative has a right to speak, you don't expel him."

■ The pope would like to visit one of the camps housing refugees from the civil wars in Syria and Iraq but cannot do so now because of security concerns.

■ Book explores Thomas Merton's Franciscan spirituality

NOTRE DAME, Ind. (CNS)—The Franciscan Heart of Thomas Merton: A New Look at the Spiritual Inspiration of His Life, Thought and Writing, a volume by Daniel P. Horan, OFM, has been released recently by Ave Maria Press.

Merton wasn't a Franciscan; he was a Trappist. Franciscan Father Daniel Horan knows that, but in this book he does his best to make certain readers are aware not only of the Franciscan connection to the famed monk, but of the depth and breadth of that connection.

After providing brief biographies of St. Francis of Assisi and Father Thomas Merton, Father Horan dives deeply into the latter's life, beginning with how the famed priest almost became a Franciscan, and what might have prevented that from occurring.

While the book often reads like an extended term paper or thesis, students of St. Francis and Father Merton will appreciate what he went into Father Horan's examination of Father Merton's heart through a Franciscan lens.

Mary SOLBERG

The word "perseverance" comes to mind as our interior peace gets battered around daily by news of terrorism, school shootings, human trafficking and disease.

Some might think these depressing topics have no place during the celebration of the most festive Advent and Christmas seasons that are now upon us. Yet the concept of perseverance is really at the core of the Christian life, even in our joy.

The Virgin Mary and St. Joseph accepted Jesus as their son, despite their fear, their uncertainties about the future, the threats to their safety, and even their very lack of a place to call home. It takes perseverance to pray and still trust that God is by our side through everything—good or bad.

Tomorrow is the Feast of the Immaculate Conception, when the Catholic Church celebrates the state of grace in which Mary herself was conceived. As we listen to the story of Jesus' birth, we will come to see Mary's trust and perseverance in the most difficult and dark surroundings.

Pope Francis has remarked on the three virtues that are apparent in the accounts of Mary found in the Gospels: her joy, her service and her perseverance. She was happy to conceive the Christ child. She was eager to serve, as seen in how quickly she visited her elderly cousin Elizabeth. And she persevered in her dedication to her son throughout her life, even watching him suffer and die on a cross.

This Christmas, watch as Mary shows us the way. In our joys, our sufferings, even as we watch what we think is a world falling apart, we must persevere, believing that every day is holy.

Even Bishop Emeritus Donald Trautman has been talking about—and living out—the message of perseverance. In Noember, he led a retreat on that theme for priests of the Diocese of Buffalo.

The retreat was to have ended on Wednesday, Nov. 19, but because of the monster storm that dumped several feet of snow on Buffalo, the priests were forced to hunker down and wait it out at the St. Columban Center in Derby, N.Y.

Situated about a mile off a main road, the retreat center was virtually isolated during the lake-effect storm. Some priests were unable to get medical prescriptions filled as snow kept piling up outside. Even poles were ineffective as 8 to 9 feet of snow drifted on top of cars. Finally, seminarians from Christ the King Seminary in Buffalo arrived to help shovel paths to the retreat house.

"The priests made the best of it after a couple of harrowing days," Bishop Trautman said.

Bishop Trautman stayed an extra two days at the retreat house, giving an unplanned lecture on St. John's Gospel. Because Interstate 90 was closed to all but trucks for several days, Bishop Trautman was forced to return to Erie via Route 5.

The dual-sided "Choose Life" billboard along Route 66 in Crown, Elk County, has gotten some great reviews. Knights of Columbus Council #10341 from St. Mary/St. Ann Parish recently erected the billboard, thanks to hard work by Dave Thimons, Don Stinebiser, Randy Andring, John McCloskey, and, of course, the property owners, Theodore and Susanna Kurtzhals.

About a year after a federal judge struck down a mandate that church-related agencies must facilitate employee access to contraceptives, sterilization and abortion-inducing drugs, lawyers for the dioceses of Erie and Pittsburgh were in court again in November, defending the ruling and contending that the mandate in the Affordable Care Act violates their First Amendment right to religious freedom.

This is simply yet another legal line in the battle over the contraceptive issue.

Why it's important to sign child refugee document

Guest Commentary
Thomas J. Gamble, Ph.D.

EDITOR'S NOTE: Mercyhurst University President Thomas J. Gamble was among more than 30 Catholic college and university presidents who signed a document this fall calling attention to the plight of undocumented minors crossing the U.S. border from Central America. "The Statement on Child Refugees"—endorsed by the Association of Catholic Colleges and Universities—says Catholic institutions of higher learning have the "opportunity and obligation to respond."

I have been asked to write about why I signed the immigration declaration that calls on the United States to offer an ethos of hospitality and kindness to child refugees, primarily from Central America, who are arriving on the Mexico-Texas border. For me, the question really is how could I not sign the declaration? Let me explain by starting with a personal reflection that places their plight in a different context.

When I was a child, my mother worked outside the home and my maternal grandmother, Savaria, largely raised me. Savaria left the poverty of southern Italy when she was very young. She couldn't speak English and she couldn't read or write English or Italian. I've never loved anyone more. I know the analogy is far from perfect, but now, when I see these dark-haired, dark-eyed children flee poverty and violence in Central America with hope for a safer, better life, I can't help but think of the young Savaria on that boat from Italy arriving in a strange new land. How could I not want our nation to recognize the frailty of contemporary children in similar circumstances? How could I not be moved by their aspirations and their fears?

Beyond the personal, though, I am the leader of a Catholic institution of higher education founded by an order of Irish nuns. The very word "Catholic" means universal; it is a universal, not a national faith. Its teaching reaches each and every continent on the planet. The Catholic Church, of course, teaches hospitality, especially to those in need: "Whatever you do for the least of these you do for me."

Our university founders, the Sisters of Mercy, whose gift is hospitality as well as mercy, came to the United States primarily to minister to poor immigrant populations in our cities. The plight of immigrants is a critical concern of the Sisters of Mercy. Again, how could I not sign a declaration asking for mercy and hospitality for these young immigrants of today?

Mercyhurst has had the opportunity to directly respond to the needs of similarly impacted young people. We are proud to have been able to provide higher education to migrant children at no cost. When asked about life before coming to college, one student explained: "It was tough. Since each harvest was temporary, we had to move to another place to make a living. This meant packing up and driving for two days. Housing was also difficult to find, being a big family. Usually the first few days we slept in the car before being given a place to stay at the temporary workplace."

The refugees at the border face even more difficult circumstances because many of them arrive without any family. If we Americans have the opportunity to transform such lives, how could we not do so?

For these reasons and many others, I am proud to have Mercyhurst among the 50 Catholic colleges and universities signing the declaration. I am proud of what Mercyhurst does and will continue to do to respond to "the least among us."

Thomas J. Gamble, Ph.D., is the president of Mercyhurst University.

Haven receives $50,000, properties

2014 Roar on the Shore chose men's shelter as its charity

BY MARY SOLBERG | FAITH/LIFE

St. Patrick's Haven, a homeless shelter for men in downtown Erie, has received three empty properties and $50,000 raised in last summer's annual Roar on the Shore motorcycle rally.

The windfall of cash and property bolstered associates of the Sisters of St. Joseph of Northwestern Pennsylvania, who have kept the shelter running since the mid-1980s.

"We started with nothing. I

always said that if it's God's will that there will be a Haven, then it will be here...and it has. The money will always come to pay the bills," said Sister Mary Fromknecht, SSI, director of St. Patrick's Haven.

According to Sister Mary, last summer's rally selected St. Patrick's Haven as its main charity. The Manufacturer & Business Association, which sponsors the event, presented the shelter with a $50,000 check. And Erie businessman Rick Griffith, a board member of the Manufacturer & Business Association, donated three vacant properties to the shelter.

The lots are located in the 200 block of E. 12th Street, only a block from the existing site. Members of the St. Patrick's Haven board already have met to discuss possible ways to use the land. Under consideration, Sister Mary said, is construction of a new building.

"We haven't arrived at any major conclusions," Sister Mary said. "But one of our hopes is to upgrade."

Having a new building would ensure the future of the shelter, especially since the donated properties are located in downtown Erie, close to those most in need, and with easy access to the nearby Emmaus Soup Kitchen.

"The site is perfect," Sister Mary said.

Last August, thousands of motorcyclists converged on Erie for the Roar on the Shore rally. Many members of the Sisters of St. Joseph, their associates, as well as board members of St. Patrick's Haven, rode or were passengers in the rally.

About 125 riders participated in the Faith and Freedom Ride that kicked off the event in front of St. Patrick's Haven.

"We had a wonderful time doing it," Sister Mary added. "The whole thing has been a wonderful example of what Erie has been able to do for these street men."

Sister Emilie Rose LeBoeuf, SSJ, devoted to teaching

Sister Emilie Rose LeBoeuf, 78, a member of the Sisters of St. Joseph of Northwestern Pennsylvania, died Nov. 17 in the 62nd year of her religious life.

Sister Emilie Rose was born in Bradford, Sept. 14, 1936, the daughter of the late Archie and Betty Gates LeBoeuf. In 1953, she entered the Sisters of St. Joseph from her home parish, St. Bernard of Clairvaux, Bradford, and professed her final vows on Aug. 15, 1959.

Mercyhurst University cuts 14 positions, reduces others to part-time employment

Fourteen administrators and staff have lost their jobs and six full-time positions have been reduced to part-time at Mercyhurst University, a private Catholic institution founded by the Sisters of Mercy in Erie.

Mercyhurst President Thomas J. Gamble notified employees of the layoffs in a letter Nov. 20, saying the cutbacks were "necessary for us to continue our goal of creating high-quality, exciting and relevant academic programs."

"Still, those affected by this news are our co-workers and our friends," Gamble added. "All have made valuable contributions to the university. Eliminating their positions to better secure our strategic future was a difficult decision, one that I own."

Gamble pointed to changing student demographics and shifting interests of students as reasons for the layoffs. Enrollment at the university dropped by about 5 percent across all Mercyhurst campuses from 2013-14 to 2014-15.

In addition to the reductions in staff, employer contributions to the pension plan will be suspended through May 2015 and the more highly paid members of the president's staff have accepted pay cuts for the remainder of the academic year.

According to Gary Brown, senior vice president for strategic finance, no faculty positions were eliminated and no academic programs were cut or reduced. Athletic programs were affected, but no jobs directly dealing with student athletes were eliminated.

Mercyhurst University has 559 full-time employees throughout its system, which includes satellite campuses in North East and Corry and at Erie's Booker T. Washington Center. Due to low enrollment, Mercyhurst closed its Girard campus at the end of the 2013-14 academic year.

Despite the layoffs, Mercyhurst plans to shift its focus more heavily in high-demand disciplines, including computer science, biomedical science, public health, big-data analytics, convergent media, digital humanities and physician assistant studies. It also expects to expand its programs at the Booker T. Washington Center.
