BI-WEEKLY NEWSPAPER OF THE DIOCESE OF ERIE

April 15, 2018

DIOCESAN NEWS

Want to learn more about families and faith?

John Roberto

John Roberto, a national leader in the fields of faith formation, youth and young adult ministry and family catechesis, will be the featured speaker at the April 24 workshop "Families at the Center of Faith" at St. Mark Catholic Center in Erie.

The Religious Education Office of the Diocese of Erie invites everyone to attend.

Those who may be particularly interested in this workshop format are pastors, religious education leaders, faith formation and parish staff, sacramental coordinators and family ministers.

"Families at the Center of Faith" is guided by the belief that families are at the center of faith formation, and that parents and the family are the most powerful influence in a child's development.

Workshop topics include understanding today's families, a 21st-century vision of faith formation, approaches and strategies for reaching and engaging today's families, and designing new initiatives and projects.

Visit www.ErieRCD.org/religiouseducation.html to register by April 17.

Good Shepherd Collection April 21-22

The Diocese of Erie has 58 priests who have reached retirement age, but 14 still remain active as a pastor, chaplain, senior associate or administrator.

These "good shepherds" continue to give themselves in countless ways of service for which we are grateful," said Msgr. Daniel Magraw, who coordinates the annual Good Shepherd Collection to benefit retired priests.

This year's collection will be held in the parishes of the 13-county diocese the weekend of April 21-22.

Last year, parishioners gave about $201,000 to the collection. In the past 10 years, a total of more than $1.7 million has been raised.

Donations fund not only the Residence for Retired Priests in Erie, but provide revenue to the Priest Retirement Pension Plan, help cover assisted living and long-term health care expenses, provide the bishop with funds for unexpected needs of incapacitated clergy, and add to the Clergy Health and Welfare Endowment.

"There is a pressing need to support those priests with supplementary assistance with their expenses for non-insured medical costs and long-term care costs," Msgr. Magraw said.

Parishioners may give to the collection at their parishes or go online to donate at www.ErieRCD.org/goodshepherd.htm.

Diocese confronts sex abuse history, updates child protection policy

Bishop Lawrence Persico is pictured speaking to reporters at St. Mark Catholic Center after he announced a significant revision to the diocesan Policy for the Protection of Children.

BY MARY SOLBERG | FAITHLIFE

The Diocese of Erie—as part of a sweeping update to its Policy for the Protection of Children—announced on April 6 the names of 34 priests and 17 lay men and women who have been credibly accused of actions which disqualify them from working with children and youth.

These actions range from the use of child pornography to sexual assault of minors, and—in the case of inaction—failure to report abuse.

These offenses were committed in the diocese dating back as far as 1944. Twenty-one of the named priests and two of the named lay people are deceased.

By releasing the names of those accused, the diocese becomes one of only about 30 Catholic dioceses in the country that have published the names of priests accused of abuse. Even rarer is Bishop Lawrence Persico's decision to release the names of credibly accused lay people who have worked in some capacity for parishes, schools, agencies, or for the diocese itself.

[Find an overview, a complete copy of the revised Policy for the Protection of Children, and the full list of names at www.ErieRCD.org/policyupdate.htm.]

"I want to express my sincere sorrow for the sexual abuse that has occurred within the church, particularly here in the Diocese of Erie," Bishop Persico said at a news conference April 6 at St. Mark Catholic Center. "I have met with victims and listened to the pain they and their loved ones experienced."

Installed as bishop of the Diocese of Erie in 2012, Bishop Persico said offenses against children are "appalling," but are even more heinous when committed by those in a position of trust.

"In publishing the list of those who have credible allegations against them, the first goal is to protect children," Bishop Persico said, adding, "It is not possible for us to monitor all the people on the list. This is an important step in helping the public become aware of information that is important for the community's well-being."

He also said it was vital to publish the names "in the hope of helping the victims/survivors move one step closer to healing. It is important they know they are not alone."

Grand jury investigation

The revisions to the Policy for the Protection of Children is one of the most significant changes to the diocesan policy since it was promulgated in 1986. Never before has the diocese released a list of credibly accused priests or lay people. The decision to do so comes at a time of increased transparency under Bishop Persico's leadership and in the wake of a Pennsylvania grand jury investigation that began in 2016.

A grand jury is a panel of individuals brought together to hear evidence of alleged crimes and consider suspects brought to its attention by a state or federal prosecutor. In Pennsylvania, the state Attorney General's Office is using the grand jury to investigate the handling of abuse cases in Erie and five other Catholic dioceses in the commonwealth.

Since it was subpoenaed with the other dioceses in September 2016, Erie has provided all its related files to the grand jury.

"With the help of outside lawyers and investigators, we have reviewed any files we could find that had anything to do with inappropriate behavior by people—both clergy and lay—working for the diocese itself, as well as any Catholic school or agency in the diocese between 1947 and 2018," Bishop Persico said. (A separate case went as far back as 1944.)

The list of names includes the late Bishop Alfred M. Watson, who is credibly alleged to have received a report about the suspected sexual abuse of a minor but failed to act on that report.

The nearly two-year investigation, according to Bishop Persico, provided the diocese with an opportunity "to intensify the efforts we had begun making to gain a fuller understanding of our past."

The grand jury is expected to release its report on all six dioceses sometime this year. That report, if it is anything like the 147-page document released in 2016 on the Diocese of Altoona-Johnstown, will name people credibly accused of committing abuse or covering it up.

On the web page of the updated Policy for the Protection of Children, the Diocese of Erie apologizes for past abuse by priests and others. But it acknowledges that "apologies...are not enough." The significant revisions to its policy are part of a comprehensive response to the situation.

According to the policy page, "The Diocese of Erie is committed to regaining the trust of not only its parishioners but of all people."

Long process of legal review, policy changes

For more than a year, the diocese has worked with the Pittsburgh-based law firm K&L Gates to cooperate with the Attorney General's Office and to update the diocesan Policy for the Protection of Children.

According to the bishop, the revised policy (www.ErieRCD.org/policyupdate.htm) is among the most comprehensive in the nation. It is part of a larger effort to ensure child protection.

Since the 1980s, the Diocese of Erie has been developing policies, procedures and training programs regarding the protection of minors. It regularly works with law enforcement, medical experts, compliance experts and members of academia to ensure that it maintains a safe environment for children and other vulnerable populations.

But, in recent months, members of the bishop's staff and administration, the Presbyteral Council and the Diocesan Review Board collaborated to review the revised policy and gave their full support.

The updated Policy for the Protection of Children features several new components, including an expanded definition section and changes in supervisory procedures and conditions for employment. It streamlines reporting procedures and expands the roles of the Office for the Protection of Children and Youth.

Specific updates include:

- An expanded set of definitions that leave no doubt as to what constitutes abuse (sexual, physical, emotional and neglectful).
- The Office for the Protection of Children and Youth will become the cen-

Trevi dollars help poor

VATICAN CITY (CNS)—People gather in front of the landmark Trevi Fountain after its 2015 restoration in Rome. Tourists traditionally throw a coin over their shoulder into the fountain hoping to return one day. But the money actually offers more concrete hope. Rome's city council has extended an agreement with Caritas Roma to entrust it with the tourists' coins to provide food and shelter to the city's poor and needy. According to Caritas Roma, about $1.7 million worth of coins were tossed into the famed fountain in 2016.

■ Interfaith rally continues King's work against racism

Franciscans hold signs during an "A.C.T. to End Racism" rally on the National Mall in Washington April 4. The rally marked the 50th anniversary of the assassination of civil rights leader the Rev. Martin Luther King Jr.

WASHINGTON (CNS)—About 2,000 people gathered on the National Mall April 4 to mark the 50th anniversary of the assassination of the Rev. Martin Luther King Jr. and to commit themselves to fighting racism and discrimination.

The gathering—called the "A.C.T. to End Racism" Rally—was organized by the National Council of Churches and featured clergy from numerous faith traditions, including Catholics, Orthodox Christians, various Protestant denominations, Jews, Muslims, Hindus, Sikhs, Zoroastrians and others.

"We have for too long lived under the scourge of racism in our society. To begin the process of healing our nation, we as Christians must join with people of all faiths in holding ourselves accountable for our complicity, and commit to righting the wrongs," said Jim Winkler, president of NCC.

■ Another Catholic priest kidnapped

NAIROBI, Kenya (CNS)—The recent kidnapping of a Congolese priest illustrates some of the problems the Catholic Church has faced during the prolonged conflict there.

Father Celestin Ngango of St. Paul Karambi Parish in the Diocese of Goma was kidnapped by armed men April 1. He was leaving a parish after celebrating Easter Mass when the abductors pulled him out of a vehicle.

The Congolese bishops' conference has demanded the priest's immediate release. Father Ngango's abduction brings to six the number of priests kidnapped since 2012 in eastern Congo.

Editor's Notes
Mary SOLBERG

Pope Francis, at age 81, continues to be a prolific writer. On April 9, he released his apostolic exhortation on the call to holiness in the modern world, Gaudete et Exsultate (Rejoice and Be Glad).

The document is inspired by the phrase used at the end of the Beatitudes (Matthew 5:12), which reads: "Rejoice and be glad for your reward will be great in heaven."

The following are some of my favorite excerpts. I hope readers meditate on them in the coming weeks of the Easter season.

• "Do not be afraid of holiness. It will take away none of your energy, vitality or joy."

• "The important thing is that each believer discern his or her own path, that they bring out the very best of themselves, the most personal gifts that God has placed in their hearts, rather than hopelessly trying to imitate something not meant for them."

• "In times when women tended to be most ignored or overlooked, the Holy Spirit raised up saints whose attractiveness produced new spiritual vigor and important reforms in the church."

• "We are frequently tempted to think that holiness is only for those who can withdraw from ordinary affairs to spend much time in prayer. That is not the case."

• "This holiness to which the Lord calls you will grow through small gestures."

• "Thanks be to God, throughout the history of the church it has always been clear that a person's perfection is measured not by the information or knowledge they possess, but by the depth of their charity."

• "We need to think of ourselves as an army of the forgiven. All of us have been looked upon with divine compassion."

• "In this call to recognize him in the poor and the suffering, we see revealed the very heart of Christ, his deepest feelings and choices, which every saint seeks to imitate."

• "The saints do not waste energy complaining about the failings of others; they can hold their tongue before the faults of their brothers and sisters and avoid the verbal violence that demeans and mistreats others."

• "Christian joy is usually accompanied by a sense of humor."

• "A community that cherishes the little details of love, whose members care for one another and create an open and evangelizing environment, is a place where the risen Lord is present, sanctifying it in accordance with the Father's plan."

• "I do not believe in holiness without prayer, even though that prayer need not be lengthy or involve intense emotions."

• "We should not think of the devil as a myth, a representation, a symbol, a figure of speech or an idea. This mistake would lead us to let down our guard, to grow careless and end up more vulnerable."

• "Let us ask the Holy Spirit to pour out upon us a fervent longing to be saints for God's greater glory, and let us encourage one another in this effort."

Printed copies of "Rejoice and Be Glad" can be ordered from the U.S. Conference of Catholic Bishops at: <http://store.usccb.org/rejoice-and-be-glad-p/7-599.htm>.

Child protection

tral depository of all allegations from any school, agency, parish or other source connected to the Catholic Church in the Diocese of Erie.

• In addition to state clearances as a condition of working with children in the diocese, employees who work with children also will need a clearance from the Office for the Protection of Children and Youth. Any employers, whether public or private—as well as anyone supervising volunteers—may contact the Office for the Protection of Children and Youth to request a clearance for prospective employees.

Msgr. Edward Lohse, vicar general and director of the Office for the Protection of Children and Youth, explained that school principals and Catholic-affiliated agencies in the diocese will have to be in-service on the policy changes, which go into effect July 1, 2018.

In an effort to further secure children's safety, all employees of parishes, schools, agencies, and of the diocese itself must agree to cooperate with child abuse investigations when necessary.

"All of these changes constitute one of the most significant updates to the child protection policy of our diocese," Msgr. Lohse said. "It is proactive rather than reactive."

Concern for victims is the priority

Even before the grand jury investigation commenced two years ago, Bishop Persico maintained a transparent posture in the face of child abuse cases. Early in his tenure as bishop, he invited Erie County District Attorney Jack Daneri to review the diocese's files to determine whether accused priests could still be prosecuted under the statute of limitations.

But that was short-lived once the grand jury was empaneled.

Still, Bishop Persico has committed to releasing the names of priests and lay persons whom the diocese believes are disqualified by their actions—or sometimes by their inaction—to work with children.

"As Catholics, we believe the Lord has infinite mercy and absolution for those who are contrite and sincerely seek forgiveness," Bishop Persico said. "But that does not mean they are free from the ramifications of their behavior."

To report abuse

Pastoral care and compassion for victims, as well as the protection of children and vulnerable adults, is a top priority of the Diocese of Erie. The diocese encourages anyone who has experienced sexual abuse or misconduct by a member of the clergy or any employee or volunteer of the church to contact law enforcement. To report abuse to the independent investigators retained by the Diocese of Erie, email ErieRCD@KLGates.com.

In addition, victims or concerned individuals can report abuse to ChildLine, an outreach of the Pennsylvania Department of Human Services, by calling 800-932-0313. The line is open 24/7, and callers may choose to remain anonymous. Victims also are welcome to contact the diocese directly to report abuse at 814-451-1543. Counseling assistance is available for victims and/or their families through the diocesan victim assistance coordinator, Dr. Robert Nelsen, who can be reached at 814-451-1521.
