Teachers hired for new school system

The newly formed Erie Catholic School System—which includes six elementary school campuses—recently offered positions to 153 teachers for next school year.

About 90 percent of those who applied for positions received job offers. Those hired all currently work in a pre-kindergarten to eighth-grade Catholic school in Erie.

"We made a concerted effort to strike a balance between honoring experience and commitment while increasing expectations and certification requirements," said Damon Finazzo, president of ECSS. The result, Finazzo said, will be an exceptional academic setting for students.

In collaboration with Superintendent Jim Gallagher and the Catholic Schools Office, ECSS is planning to offer teachers new opportunities for leadership roles within their buildings, new tools and continuing education for curriculum and instructional development.

Set to launch with the 2017-18 academic year, ECSS comprises the following schools: Blessed Sacrament, Our Lady of Peace, St. George, St. James, St. Jude and St. Luke. The total number of teaching positions increased across the six campuses, which up until now were parish-based schools.

More than 90 percent of the current kindergarten through eighth-grade students in the six schools re-enrolled at one of the six ECSS schools for next year.

Each school will have full- or part-time teachers dedicated to music, art, technology, library, physical education and guidance, as well as full-time teachers for the core subjects of religion, math, science, language arts and social studies. All prospective teachers in core subjects are certified.

The Diocese of Erie proposed the formation of ECSS as part of its Building in Truth and Love comprehensive plan for Catholic schools in the 13-county diocese.

Created in 2016, ECSS is led by a president who is advised by a board of directors and governed by a set of by-laws.

Diocese opens new mission school

Mother Teresa Academy reaches out to inner-city students in Erie

BY MARY SOLBERG | FAITHLIFE

Abby Williams cried tears of joy—tinged with sadness—when she learned last week that the Diocese of Erie was opening a new inner-city elementary school in Erie.

She was happy to learn that the new Mother Teresa Academy would provide a practically free Catholic education to her children, along with before- and after-school care. But she felt sad knowing that opening Mother Teresa meant closing another school, her alma mater Holy Family, located only four blocks from her home on Erie's east side.

"I grew up at Holy Family and all my kids were baptized there," Williams said, "but honestly, it made me cry that the diocese is being so generous offering to continue the education of my children and other city children."

On June 1, Bishop Lawrence Persico announced that Mother Teresa Academy—a mission school for grades K-8—would open in January 2018 at the former St. Peter Cathedral School, W. 11th and Sassafras streets. It will replace Holy Family, located fewer than two miles away at 1153 E. 9th St.

For 33-year-old Williams and her husband, Gary, 41, sending most of their six children to Catholic schools has been a priority, despite the day-to-day struggle to make ends meet. They both work, but have depended on scholarships.

Mother Teresa Academy, modeled after Jubilee Catholic Schools in Memphis, Tenn., and other cities, offers an innovative tuition structure.

Although annual tuition will be set at $5,000, those who qualify for free lunch under the Federal Poverty Guidelines for Free and Reduced Lunch will only have to pay $250 per year, beginning in September 2017. Families who qualify for reduced lunches will pay $500 per year.

Another bonus for needy families is that Mother Teresa will be open from 7 a.m. to 5 p.m. each school day. Before- and after-school care will be included in tuition costs. "I love the name, Mother Teresa Academy," Williams added. "Growing up at Holy Family, Mother Teresa was a big name and we learned a lot about her. I'm hoping the name will give out a good, positive vibe."

Mother Teresa, who was canonized a saint last year, founded the Missionaries of Charity in the slums of India. According to Bishop Persico and others involved in the creation of Mother Teresa Academy, her mission spirit will pervade everything the school does.

'WE ALL HAVE SELF-WORTH'

L'Arche member honored for service to diocese

BY MARY SOLBERG | FAITHLIFE

For the past 18 years, Matt Johnson has stuffed folders and affixed labels on envelopes for the Family Life Office of the Diocese of Erie.

Mostly, his favorite job is stuffing the folders for Pre-Cana classes.

"I like it," says Matt, who at 44 is a member of Erie's L'Arche, a faith-based community in which people with and without intellectual disabilities share their lives together.

Christine Hess, the Family Life director, calls Matt "a beautiful volunteer," one who completes every job with a smile. At a May 25 luncheon in his honor, Hess presented Matt with a framed certificate, saying, "You are a joy to all of us and a blessing from God."

Matt, along with his mother, Jackie

Johnson, attended the event with members of Erie's L'Arche community and both past and present staff of Catholic Charities at St. Mark Catholic Center. Matt's weekly volunteer visits have made quite an impression.

Michele Inter, the new director of the Office of Disability and Deaf Ministries, recognized Matt's impact and suggested that Catholic Charities honor him as an outstanding volunteer. He will continue to work for Charities on a weekly basis.

"We all have self-worth and we need some reinforcement once in a while that we're doing a good job and that we're loved and appreciated for what we do and who we are," Inter says.

Matt hugged Inter as she presented him with his own personalized Catholic Charities jacket and hat.

Jackie Johnson, who previously headed up the Office of Disability and Deaf Ministries, was surprised when she got the phone call saying Catholic Charities wanted to honor her son for his volunteer work.

"He likes the work and he loves the people. You can see," she says, looking proudly at Matt.

Kevin Forte, director of development for L'Arche Erie, also attended the luncheon. He accepted a donation to the organization from Ann Badach, executive director of Catholic Charities.

"The gift is fantastic," Forte says. "We'll forward it to our core members so they can go on retreats, go out to dinner or go to games."

A member of L'Arche's Rose House in Erie, Matt is a member of St. Andrew Parish in Erie and is the son of Jackie and Wayne Johnson.

Christine Hess, director of the Family Life Office of the Diocese of Erie, reads the certificate of recognition to Matt Johnson.

Matt Johnson is delighted to see a present given to him by Michele Inter, director of the Office of Disability and Deaf Ministries.

■ Vietnam chaplain considered for possible sainthood

Maryknoll Father Vincent R. Capodanno, a Navy chaplain killed while serving with the Marines in Vietnam, is pictured ministering in the field in an undated photo.

WASHINGTON (CNS)—A tribunal of the U.S. Archdiocese for the Military Services has finished its nearly four-year inquiry into whether the life of Father Vincent R. Capodanno, a Vietnam War hero and U.S. Navy chaplain, merits consideration for sainthood.

Archbishop Timothy P. Broglio, who heads the Washington-based military archdiocese, announced May 21 that the archdiocesan phase in the Maryknoll priest's cause has concluded. His announcement came at the end of the 23rd annual memorial Mass honoring U.S. military members at the Basilica of the National Shrine of the Immaculate Conception in Washington.

The decision clears the way for the tribunal's findings to go to the Vatican's Congregation for Saints' Causes for its review and a possible decision on whether to advance the priest's cause to the next stage in the sainthood process.

Father Capodanno, a Navy chaplain who served with the Marines, died in Operation Swift in the Thanh Binh district of the Que Son Valley. He went among the wounded and dying, giving last rites. Wounded in the face and hand, he went to help an injured corpsman only yards from an enemy machine gun and was killed.

■ Catholic father of four killed trying to protect Muslim women

PORTLAND, Ore. (CNS)—On a crowded Portland commuter train May 26, a Catholic father of four stepped forward to calm a tense situation.

Rick Best defended two women being accosted by a passenger yelling hate speech about Muslims and other groups. Best, a 53-year-old member of Christ the King Parish in Milwaukie, Ore., would die for his noble deed.

In less than a minute, he and another defender were slain, slashed in the neck in front of horrified onlookers. A third man survived the knife attack. Best's funeral Mass was held June 5 at Christ the King Church.

The accused killer, 35-year-old Jeremy Christian, had been on a racially charged rampage.

Portland Archbishop Alexander K. Sample sought to comfort a city shocked by the brutal slayings. "Pray for those who may now feel unsafe in moving freely about a city that truly welcomes people of all cultures, faith traditions and walks of life," Archbishop Sample said.

■ Pope urges people to get 'spiritual electrocardiogram'

VATICAN CITY (CNS)—Never speak, act or make a decision without first listening to the Holy Spirit, who moves, troubles and inspires the heart, Pope Francis advised.

A cold and calculating heart that is closed to the Holy Spirit results in a faith that is "ideological," he said May 29 during a morning Mass in the chapel of the Domus Sanctae Marthae.

If people were to get a "spiritual electrocardiogram," the pope asked, would it be flat-lined because the heart is hardened, unmoved and emotionless or would it be pulsating with the prompting and prods of the Spirit?

Care for the earth is central to our faith

Editor's Notes

Mary SOLBERG

Call it what you want—"deeply troubling" or "terrible"—President Donald Trump's recent decision to withdraw the U.S. from the 2015 Paris climate accord is disappointing to many of us.

Catholic leaders throughout the world decried the decision—using all of these adjectives and more.

Endorsed by Pope Francis, and signed by 195 nations, the Paris pact aims to cut global greenhouse gas emissions and protect our world for future generations.

Bishop Oscar Cantu of Las Cruces, N.M., chairman of the U.S. bishops' Committee on International Justice and Peace, said Trump's decision "will harm the people of the United States and the world, especially the poorest, most vulnerable communities."

This echoes the viewpoint of Pope Francis, who last June released Laudato Si', his environment encyclical that challenges all of God's people to protect "our common home" and stop the global warming crisis. What I like about Laudato Si' is that everyone—even our smallest children—are asked to be a part of the effort.

Over the past year, FaithLife has shared many photos and stories of children in diocesan schools and adults in parishes discussing ways to protect the environment. Sister Marian Wehler, OSB, and Sister Tina Geiger, RSM, were among the many who promoted discussions with children at St. Stephen School in Oil City, and St. Patrick School in Franklin. They talked about ways to not waste food, to save water and electricity, and to recycle.

The Bethany Retreat Center in Frenchville and Mount Saint Benedict Monastery in Erie also have offered retreat programs on Laudato Si'.

The pope's challenge has meant a great deal to people who live in our diocese and elsewhere. Short-sightedness won't keep sea levels from rising or glaciers from melting. And it definitely won't protect the most marginalized populations of our world who will be the first to suffer the ill effects of climate change, i.e., lack of food, forced evacuations from homelands, poor health, to name a few.

In this contributed file photo, students at Immaculate Conception School in Clarion put into action Pope Francis' message to care for the earth and all of its creatures.

In 1970, when the first Earth Day was established, I was a student at Blessed Sacrament School in Erie. We made green and white ecology flags out of tissue paper and cardboard.

Our teachers challenged us to be mindful of the world around us. They asked us to notice the birds singing or to look at the color variations of the evergreens that lined our morning commute.

The sanctity of life in all of its forms is at the core of the teachings of the Catholic Church.

As Bishop Cantu said, "I can only hope that the president will propose concrete ways to address global climate change and promote environmental stewardship."

Cathedral begins 125th anniversary

Guest Commentary
Sheila Grove

1893. For almost 125 years, St. Peter Cathedral has stood out from the landscape of Erie as a symbol of our Catholic faith witnessed by all.

The cathedral is so familiar to us; we overlook the privilege we have of visiting it frequently. It has withstood a fire, vandalism and the strife of more than a century. Over a period of time, dirt and grime obliterated the stunning pink sandstone that we now see.

We are enthralled by the stained glass windows that were reset in the 1990s. They allow more light to shine through and inspire our prayer. The windows, in fact, tell a story of the life of Jesus and pay tribute to many of the most inspiring figures in our church's history. The 12 columns in the nave of the church are just one example of the historical symbolism of the building and honor the 12 tribes of Israel as well as the 12 Apostles and their witness to God's covenant.

As we enter the 125th anniversary of the Mother Church of the Diocese of Erie, I encourage everyone to walk through the doors of the cathedral, look around and look up. You may notice something you have never seen before. Give thanks for the thousands of Catholics inspired by the Holy Spirit who have worked to maintain all that you see. Give thanks that you can consider this your home and that you are an integral part of its next hundred years.

In the coming year, it would be good to recall Revelations 21:11,23, which reads: "It gleamed with the splendor of God. Its radiance was like that of a precious stone...the glory of God gave it light and its lamp was the Lamb."

"It was my sincere hope in restructuring our Catholic schools in the Erie area that we would be able to maintain our commitment to students in the inner-city," Bishop Persico said. "Everyone recognizes this need in our community."

He lauded the efforts of an exploratory committee under the leadership of Tina Donikowski, a retired senior executive and corporate officer at GE Transportation. The committee began work on the mission school concept in May 2016.

Last February, the Cathedral Prep and Villa Maria Academy board of directors approved a resolution to own and operate the new school.

There was an initial round of philanthropic community support and one "substantial" gift from an anonymous donor that provided the final green light to proceed, according to Chris Hagerty, director of strategic initiatives for Prep-Villa.

"We're not done fundraising yet. The goal has always been to find funding now that will fund the next five years," Hagerty said. "We're not there yet, but we're very close."

Donikowski championed the effort with Sister Rosemary O'Brien, SSI, who has worked for many years in inner-city parishes and with the migrant community; David Slomski, senior vice president of business banking at Marquette Savings Bank; and Attorney Jim Walzak, partner with MacDonald Illig Jones & Britton.

"I grew up on the lower east side; so did my husband. We're beneficiaries of Catholic education. We think that it should be available to anyone, no matter what their economic situation is," Donikowski said.

THINGS TO KNOW

■ All new applicants to Mother Teresa Academy must be residents of the City of Erie.

■ Priority will be given to new students who meet the Federal Poverty Guidelines and who are not currently enrolled at other Catholic schools in the area.

■ Families at Mother Teresa Academy will sign a contract in which they agree to be involved in their child's education through volunteer work and by participation in parent-teacher conferences.

■ Renovations at the future school will be done between July and November.

Deacons begin 'ministry of service'

FAITHLIFE staff report

Quoting Pope Francis, Bishop Lawrence Persico on May 26 told the four men ordained permanent deacons for the Diocese of Erie, "Whoever serves, saves."

Kevin Harmon, Gerald Peterson, Daniel Satterlee and Joseph Yochim Jr. each embraced their new ministerial role in the Catholic Church during an evening ordination Mass at St. Peter Cathedral in downtown Erie. They bring the number of permanent deacons ordained in the diocese to 80.

"By your faithful service to the Gospel in its integrity—without compromise, without accommodation, hesitation or fear—you must help the world to discern the truth that has a human face, the truth that is the person of Jesus Christ," Bishop Persico said.

For Deacon Peterson, the most inspiring moment of the ritual came when he and his classmates were lying prostrate before the altar, giving their entire selves to God's service.

"It was like the Holy Spirit just descending saying, 'Be at peace and enjoy where you are,'" Peterson said.

The diaconate is the first of three ranks in ordained ministry. Deacons preparing for the priesthood are transitional deacons. Those not planning to be ordained priests are called permanent deacons. Married men may be ordained permanent deacons, and single men may be ordained to the permanent diaconate with a commitment to celibacy.

Cursillo dance nets about $828 for charity

ERIE—Past presidents of the Erie Diocesan Cursillo Movement recently hosted their annual charity dance at Holy Rosary Parish in Erie.
